CSM(Ret.) Dr. Pamela A. Wilson U.S. Army

What does I.AM.WOC mean to me? This organization inspires me to gather any tools in my inventory and re-cycle them for the authentication of military women of color. Hugs - VP

Dr. Pamela A. Wilson has served as part-time faculty with Trident University International since 2009. She has helped students from their entry into the master's program to completion of their doctoral degrees. She retired as a Religious Affairs Specialist (formerly Chaplain Assistant) Sergeant Major in April 2017 from the United States Army after serving with distinction for 32 years. She is a combat veteran serving as the most senior enlisted leader for religious support in the theater of Iraq. Some of her expertise are course development, training, team building, leadership development, mentoring and personnel evaluations. She served as Instructor at all levels of the Army. She re-wrote and directed the Spouse Leadership Development Course at the US Army Sergeants Major Academy graduating over 300 senior-level spouses. Dr. Wilson was the 1st Director of the Personnel Proponent Directorate for Training and Doctrine Command. Her efforts led to the development of the interactive Personnel Development Model (PDM – a tab on the Army Career Tracker) monitoring a Soldier career. She started the first recognition program for Chaplain Assistants in Europe. She was the 1st Chaplain Sergeant Major for Installation Management Command (IMCOM) responsible for training and developing leaders on 77 Army Installations around the world. In this final Army assignment at IMCOM, she developed recognition programs featured in newspapers, social media and in 33 monthly newsletters she created and edited featuring Chaplain Assistants, past and present. Her interests in research are behavior driven ideologies. She is concerned with self-efficacy, self-esteem, motivational behaviors that drive learning. She holds a PhD in Educational Leadership (Trident University International); a master's in public administration (Troy State University); Bachelor of Science in Recreation, Chicago State University, and Associates of Arts in Physical Education, Kennedy-King Jr. College. She is founding Past Matron of A.R.E.M.E. of Babylon, Oklahoma Jurisdiction. Dr. Wilson has numerous awards commensurate with her years of experience.
